wing into a real fight burg. Looks like old times.

Stanley Ketchel and Jim Jeffries are dividing the public attention that Jeff monopolized a few days ago. Ketchel is the new-comer. He rushed to New York when Billy Britt, alias Willus, wired him that the match with Philadelphia Jack O'Brien was on for the National A. C. Ketch came in such a hurry that he forgot to take off hisbandana and his high boots-these articles of apparel being au fait where Ketch halls from. Consequently when "Ketch" struck Broadway and wandered past the Metropole there was a sudden rush of dips and buncoists. But they didn't get anything. "Ketch" has travelled before.

This ought to be a good scrap-the Ketchel-O'Brien affair. O'Brien has been taking good care of himself over in Philadelphia. Most of the time of late he has spent boxing with high society, notably Drexel Biddle.

Jack's hands have been badly broken, and he needed the long rest to let them and he needed the long rest to let them strengthen again.

If the go is on the level it ought to be very interesting for O'Brien, in spite of his eleverness and fast footwork. Ketchel has caught men just as fast as O'Brien, and put them away with a single punch. That's what happened to Mike Twin Sullivan, who is as swift as O'Brien any day. "Ketch" swung one-curtains-ambulance.

On the other hand, O'Brien counts upon being able to outbox the champion. He has, now and then, outboxed dangerous men, even when he didn't have their hands tied.

EFFRIES opens to-might, and the see the great man in ection. The public has been waiting anxiously ever since Jeffries arrived. I'll tell you one thing before the show begins. You're men. Step right this way. right up. Don't be afraid. Greatest show on earth. Two undisputed world's champions. On your right you view the walleyed hippo, who stamps men into the earth as you would step on a potato bug. On the left, ladies and gentlemen, is the long-haired, terrific, world destroying mansluggerillo, caught in the wilds of California.

Two of 'em-count 'em-two great world's champions here in New York at once-not to mention Able Attell, who makes three, and Battling Nelson, who will count fourth as soon as he arrives from the West, and little Coulon, who is McGraw has originated a batting play that ought to work wonders next season, and he is working the old fellows on it twice a day. It is a half squeeze play, and is only played when second and first bases are occupied, with one out. The situation comes up frequently in baseball, and McGraw has been trying to solve a way out of the difficulty without taking the chance of having the side retired on long files and no runs scored. At a given signal from the coaching line the man starts from second as if to steal third. The batter then hits the ball a third.
